Photo: Steve Schapiro/Black Star

Arthur Rubinstein

Cary Grant
The English lad who began life as Archie Leach and later was renamed Cary Grant came to the United States in 1921, and at the age of 17 began an acting career that has included numerous plays and nearly 30 films (Destination Tokyo, To Catch a Thief, Indiscreet, North by Northwest). Grant, whose multiple marriages have embraced such luminaries as heiress Barbara Hutton and actress Dyan Cannon, is one of the most financially adroit and versatile entertainers in history—he now serves as a member of Fabergé's board of directors. His last movie was Walk Don't Run, and he has been quoted as saying that he does not plan to do any more films. But that, of course, is only until that perfect next role comes along.

Arthur Rubinstein
A piano virtuoso since his first concert in 1901 in Berlin when he was just 14 years old, Arthur Rubinstein has never stopped delighting audiences during three-quarters of a century of magnificent music. Rubinstein still records, still tours and still amazes. He is a musical talent without peer and a wonder for all the world to enjoy.

Martha Graham
In the midst of the fiftieth anniversary season of her dance company and the sixtieth anniversary of her career as a dancer and choreographer, Martha Graham and the Martha Graham Dance Company have been invited to perform in July at London's Royal Opera House, Covent Gardens—the first time a modern dance troupe will have appeared there. Miss Graham, choreographer of more than 150 works, is extraordinarily active, having completed in January in New York the longest run of modern dance—a full month—ever attempted in this country. Martha Graham is a wonder.

Armand Hammer
An entrepreneur with equal flair for business, international diplomacy and art, Armand Hammer is certainly one of the most interesting and active figures in America. Hammer, who once was received by Lenin, is a nonpracticing physician who has made a fortune from a string of successful industrial operations including Occidental Petroleum Corporation, which was a three-man company when he acquired it in 1957 and is now one of the

Photo: UPI

Martha Graham